“I can support and say that the establishment of an institution like British Persian Media would be a great step to promoting and strengthening academic and cultural relations between Iran and Britain.”

Dr N Fazeli

Associate Professor at University of Tehran
Associate Researcher at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London

“I think absolutely any independent organisation committed not only to the political, parliamentary side of politics but also to the arts, culture and the overall relations between the two countries is very important. This is very much in their mutual best interest and I welcome it [British Persian Media] with open arms.”

Lord Temple-Morris

Chairman of the British-Iranian All Party Parliamentary Group

“There is not a single independent news agency or media company completely devoted to these two countries. To the best of my knowledge there is an obvious gap in the news industry for providing correct, first-hand and fresh news about this relationship for public and media organisations in both countries as well as other users. British Persian Media can fill this gap and play an important role to bring these two countries closer to each other for positive bilateral, regional and international co-operation.”

Dr M Tafreshi

Historian and Researcher in modern Persian and Shia studies and Anglo-Persian relations.
Royal Holloway, University of London
Member of the International Society of Iranian Studies (ISIS)

What is British Persian Media?

British Persian Media is a private UK based, independent and multi-functional news organisation which specifically deals with British-Iranian relations.

Its main objective is bridging the cultural gap between Iran and Britain.

In seeking to achieve its objectives, British Persian Media covers various aspects in the relationship between the two countries. These aspects include delivering a factual, unbiased and transparent image of both countries.

British Persian Media has been formed and founded by a group of British-Iranian journalists and academics, hoping to help bridge the cultural distance between Iran and Britain, and in a more general approach, the West.

We believe we can reach this end through the provision of information to both countries. This would be the first of its kind as far as the history of these two countries is concerned.
